After completing her legal studies in Geneva, which she complemented with an exchange program at the University of Panthéon-Assas in Paris, Marie Berger namely worked as a trainee clerk at the Geneva Superior Court of Justice before passing the bar exam in 2009.

Since, she became an associate, then partner, with the Firm BRS Berger Recordon & de Saugy (formerly BRS AVOCATS), where she specializes in family law, focusing primarily on national and international divorces and child custody litigation, matrimonial estate, nuptial and prenuptial agreements and same sex partnership. She frequently works on cases involving international child abduction.

Regularly appointed as legal representative of minors by Geneva civil courts, she's also one of the on-call attorneys for the child protection association Juris Conseil Junior.

She is a member of the Geneva Bar Association, the Swiss lawyer's Federation, and the Human Rights Commission of the Geneva Bar Association.
